both kinds of extracapsular extraction leave the back of the capsule intact, so a silicone or plastic intraocular lens can be stably implanted in about the same location as the original lens.

young internally limits the number you can produce from a single mating, while the extensive post-natal