but for the first time in the same paper, the researchers bumped into the testosterone conundrum: men with the highest levels of testosterone were also at some increased risk too.